Fee Stations to be Consolidated to Reduce Theft, Vandalism

REEDSPORT, Ore. – Repeated theft and vandalism of fee stations in isolated locations along the Oregon Coast is causing Siuslaw National Forest officials to reconsider how it collects user fees that support local recreational activities.

The frequently targeted fee stations will be removed and visitors will be directed to nearby fee stations in more secure locations or to local businesses that serve as recreation pass vendors.

“Providing safe and enjoyable recreational opportunities to the public is a Forest Service priority, and recreation fees play an important role in that mission,” said Tom Johnson, the recreation coordinator who oversees the area’s fee collection program.

Recreation fees are retained locally and are reinvested to support and maintain recreation facilities and programs throughout the Siuslaw National Forest and Oregon Dunes National Recreation Area.

The selected fee stations are expected to be removed by April 2016.

Visitors should be aware that recreation passes still will be required at fee sites even if a self-service fee station isn’t available. Affected sites will have directions posted to the next closest fee station or pass vendor.

A list of recreation pass vendors throughout Oregon and Washington is continually updated under the Passes and Permits section at fs.usda.gov/siuslaw. Online pass sales also are available through the site.

Forest Service officials invite suggestions for other ways to facilitate payment of day-use fees in lieu of self-service fee stations by calling 541-271-6001.
